

The Jesus Rehab

The Zoo At Night

The Jesus Rehab's new full-length "The Zoo At Night" is full of sweet, muscular garage pop. The Seattle band, who in April of 2012 put out their first record as a duo, have since played a ton of excellent shows, benefits, and tours. Streamlined recently to a two-piece, brothers Jared and Dominic consciously construct songs that are gritty, raw, and honest. The brothers' current goal is to jump into a sea of screaming maniacs, and they continue to make records that inspire madness in their audience, intending to make this dream come true.

"The Zoo At Night" is that album. Their live shows have always been athletic-art damage events as the two brothers feed off each other's energy dancing and singing with their fans. That is where you will find The Jesus Rehab "singing and stomping until there's nothing left but two brothers having a good time as Seattle's most exclusive club" (Popstache.com).

"I honestly feel like it's the best title we've ever come up with," Jared says about the name of the new full-length. "We felt like the lyrical content of the album is very much about childhood and the music is dark yet playful, so we wanted something that reflected that. The name is a reference to what we imagine the zoo at night being when everyone leaves, this crazy place where all of the animals hang out and let loose." "The Zoo At Night" was produced and engineered by David Miner, who had worked with TJR on their previous EP "Drunken Hillbilly Bar Fight" as well.

In the last two years, The Jesus Rehab have rocked their way through Seattle with gigs at mainstays including The Tractor Tavern, The Crocodile, and Columbia City Theater. They have also toured the West Coast multiple times, played shows at SXSW in Austin, TX (2011 and 2012), Noise For The Needy, and the Big Ass Boom Box Festival in Portland, OR. This past year, The Jesus Rehab toured the Midwest, East Coast, and select cities down the West Coast. They are releasing a new record in the Spring 2014, called "The Zoo At Night", and plan to tour extensively including stops throughout the western United States in March 2014, including a return to SXSW. This will be the band's third official release, and first LP since 2010.

Press contact:
Chris Estey
Big Freak Media PR
5247 15th Avenue NE, #301
Seattle, WA 98105
(206) 728-0457
estey@bigfreakmedia.com

Track list:

- 1) Mind Readers*
- 2) Lickin' My Wounds
- 3) Evil Eye*
- 4) Cannonball
- 5) Sallie
- 6) The Zoo At Night
- 7) Battle Scars
- 8) Power*
- 9) Family Portrait
- 10) Kaarin Keil
- 11) Vertigo

*Recommended Tracks

Album Release Date:
Tuesday, 2/4/2014

Dominic Cortese - Vox, Percussion
Jared Cortese - Lead Vox, Guitar, Piano

<http://www.thejesusrehab.com/>